Elise Sweeney Anthony, JD

Senior Policy Advisor

Office of the National Coordinator for Health Information Technology

Elise Sweeney Anthony is a senior policy advisor in the Office of the National Coordinator for Health Information Technology (ONC) within the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. Anthony is responsible for ONC's engagement on a variety of federal policy efforts, including meaningful use (MU) policy and policy matters impacting non-MU care settings.

Anthony is an experienced health policy attorney and advisor. She spent many years at a leading law firm where she led a variety of health improvement initiatives, including initiatives on care delivery, innovation, health technology, and at-risk/rural population health. Prior to joining ONC, she served as a senior director at a global development consultancy where she focused on health improvement in international conflict zones and on addressing health disparities in developing regions. Anthony also worked for then Senator Hillary Rodham Clinton as a policy fellow addressing child welfare protections for children in need.

Anthony received her Juris Doctor degree from Georgetown University Law Center and her Bachelor's degree in Political Science from Morgan State University, where she was a Ralph Bunche Scholar.
